Status Resolution Support Services (SRSS) payment—Reporting your income

If you or your partner have started working you will need to let us know immediately. This is because what you and your partner earn affects your SRSS payments.

We need to know what you have earned each fortnight, so you are paid the right amount. If you are overpaid an SRSS payment, you will have to pay the money back.

What do I need to report?

Income from employment:

- gross income from salary, wages and/or commission, including sick pay, carer's leave or holiday pay.

Income from other sources:

- gifts or allowances of a regular nature
- income from a deceased estate
- sickness or accident insurance.

What do we need to know?

When reporting yours and your partner's income, we need to know:

- the gross income amount—the amount earned before tax during your reporting period (14 days)
- your employer's details—including their business name, address, phone number and Australian Business Number (ABN) if known. You will find your employer's ABN on your payslip, or you can ask your employer
- the date you started work.

You must report yours and your partner's income for the entire 14 days of your reporting period, including the first and last days, even if you haven't yet been paid by your employer. Remember, not everyone reports on the same day, so some customers may have a different reporting period to you.

When do I report?

You must tell us immediately if you and/or your partner get a job, stop working or your income changes.

Once you start work you need to report your income the day BEFORE your SRSS pay day every two weeks.

How do I report my income?

By phone:

- on the day BEFORE your SRSS payday, call 131 202 and say "SRSS" when asked for your language. You can speak to someone in your language by calling this number.

In person:

- on the day BEFORE your SRSS payday you can complete and lodge an Income Reporting Statement form by visiting a service centre to speak with a Service Officer. Many service centres have interpreters or bilingual staff, or a telephone interpreter can be arranged.

What if I am self-employed?

- You will be given a Business Details form (MOD F) to complete and return.
- You need to provide a three month estimate of Profit and Loss, either from an accountant or by completing a Profit and Loss Statement form (SU580).
- We will assess your profit and loss and establish your average fortnightly profit.
- We will assess your profit and loss every three months until you have an income tax return that represents the full financial year of trading.

Who can report your income?

- You, or your partner.
- You may have another person such as your Service Provider contact us on your behalf.

Remember it is your responsibility to report your earnings correctly every fortnight in order to avoid an overpayment.
