Changes to your circumstances may affect your payment. If you don't tell us, you may need to pay back money we've paid you.

Use our online self service options to tell us about any changes.

Concession cards

Concession cards provide access to a range of Australian Government concessions. These can reduce the cost of some health care services or prescription medicines through the Pharmaceutical Benefits Scheme.

Concession cards can also give you other concessions from state and local government authorities and private businesses.

If you get a payment such as Youth Allowance, Austudy or ABSTUDY Living Allowance, you'll also get a Health Care Card. We'll send you one when we approve your claim.

Some students and apprentices can't get one of those payments because their parents or partner earns too much. If you're in this situation, you can apply for a Low Income Health Care Card.

Use the digital wallet in your myGov app to store your concession card or health care card on your mobile device.

For more information about concession cards, go to servicessaustralia.gov.au/concessioncards or call us.

Someone to act for you

If you'd prefer to have someone else handle your Medicare, Centrelink or Child Support business, you can ask a person or organisation to act for you.

We can pay some ABSTUDY and AIC payments directly to the school. Parents may want the school to be able to ask about payments on their behalf. This is called giving them permission to enquire.

For more information about these arrangements:

- go to servicessaustralia.gov.au/actforyou
- call us
- visit a service centre.
