Other parent's details

You must be certain that the person you are naming as the parent is in fact named in the register of births for the child(ren) as a parent. This means you have either:

- sighted a full copy of the child(ren)'s birth certificate and confirmed the person is named as a parent, or
- confirmed with Births, Deaths and Marriages that the person is named as a parent for the child(ren) in the register.

If the parent applying for a birth certificate for the child names the other parent in the application, but the other parent does not complete and send in an independent declaration, then the other parent may not in fact be registered as a parent of the child and you could be making a false declaration.
